Smooth Hummus

Sauces & dips | Stovetop & prep

Before you start

Drain and rinse chickpeas. Crush garlic. Cream tahini with lemon juice before adding other ingredients.

Ingredients

Matching letters and colors = one prep bowl. Charcoal = keep separate.

Bowl A - Tahini and lemon juice

Bowl B - Garlic and salt

- [ ] 2 (15 oz) cans chickpeas, drained and rinsed
- [ ] 2/3-3/4 cup tahini [Bowl A]
- [ ] 1/2 cup lemon juice [Bowl A]
- [ ] 4 cloves garlic, crushed [Bowl B]
- [ ] 1 tsp sea salt [Bowl B]
- [ ] 1/4 cup olive oil
- [ ] 1/4 cup water
- [ ] Cayenne (amount unspecified)
- [ ] Cumin (amount unspecified)
- [ ] Paprika for topping

1. Prepare and cook

1. Drain and rinse the chickpeas and set aside. You can spend the time taking the little skins off each chickpea but it's pretty time consuming and not so much creamier that I think it's worth it. This recipe gets pretty creamy even without that step.

2. Combine the tahini and the lemon juice and blend until smooth and frothy. This is the key to getting it creamy, by the way. You have to combine these 2 ingredients first, essentially cream the tahini, or it just won't blend perfectly with the chickpeas.

3. Add the garlic and salt and blend again.

4. Now add in the chickpeas about 1/3 of the can at a time and blend until smooth. Try to get as few skins as possible, this will also help with the texture. Scrap down the sides of the blender and push the chickpeas down to the bottom as needed. Once you've got all the chickpeas blended in, add the olive oil and turn on the blender and just leave it for a few minutes. I like to add in a little water too, to get the consistency just how I like it.

Notes

Optional additions in the file: a large handful of parsley, 2 scallions, and 1/2 tsp each coriander, ginger, dry mustard, turmeric, and paprika. Their addition timing is not specified.

Cayenne and cumin amounts are unspecified. Sprinkle paprika on top. The original file also contains orange hummus and tahini sauce.
